Various authors have suggested that the use of a single, standardized questionnaire to assess the prevalence of mental health problems in the general population is not ideal. This is because the use of a single questionnaire may not be sensitive enough to detect all mental health problems, and it may not be specific enough to identify the exact nature of the problem. This is why many researchers use a combination of different questionnaires to assess mental health problems in the general population.

Images depicted all good values (honesty, hard work, etc.) and bad values (greed, dishonesty, etc.) and were used to elicit a variety of responses from the participants. The images were used to elicit a variety of responses from the participants.
