Marshall's correspondence is a richly documented and lively chronicle. The correspondence was important to him, and under his hand collection of letters, with an introduction, bibliography and critical essays, followed numerous editions. Letters associated with his private affairs, his business with U.S. and other correspondents in the United States, his legal correspondence in Massachusetts, correspondence with friends, his reports for publication, with those composed, or forwarded, without exception, to those with whom he was working, including, frequently, preparation of the proposed documents, following the correspondence, were generally preserved, and many of them have been published, in the volume with the letters and reports, and many that have not, in various other books. His private letters, the letters about business, and the reports themselves, the greater part of the correspondence, especially correspondence with friends, are published in the present volume.

Household expenditures across the border generally are the same. But important differences in the way that expenditures are reported to the general ledger can be seen in the way that the two countries use their general ledger. In the United States, the general ledger is the income tax return. In the United Kingdom, the general ledger is the annual accounts. The two countries use different methods of recording their general ledger. In the United States, the general ledger is the income tax return. Multi-state management capabilities is another very important technology aspect that needs to be addressed. While the traditional ERP system the majority of firms used has suffered the significant security issues over the past several years, the general ledger, marketing and collection as the primary financial information source has remained as the core of corporate ERP. The majority of firms, and the leading large firms, have integrated their core financial and customer information under a single platform, and value their general ledger as the center of the core information. The integration over the following business years is:
