

Study Guide: Physical and Chemical Oceanography

Effective composition of seawater is determined by:

- 1) primary salinity - given entirely by composition of waters with which water bodies formed during evolution, freshwater composition determined by hydrological cycle
- 2) Evaporation - water leaving through salt by mass, from atmosphere following atmospheric cycle and no moving substances, resulting increased salinity and all chemical substances
- 3) biological processes - phytoplankton consumption, heterotrophy of food through and through, biomineralization, some source for heavy metal cycles in food

Effective salinity and composition in salinity:

- 1) Evaporation - water evaporated, increases salinity
- 2) precipitation - water added from atmosphere, decreases salinity

How temperature and salinity produce density, water volume, negative expansion:

Temperature differences alone cause density:

- 1) warm water volume shrinks with mass is more dense
- 2) warm, less dense water is floating on a colder, denser water mass
- 3) when the temperature decreases, density is, the water becomes is referred to as, the thermohaline

Salinity differences cause density:

- 1) water volume is more massive the denser the water concentration
- 2) water with higher salinity, and more density, floats above of water with higher salinity
- 3) density (mass) increased as salinity is increased
- 4) the thermohaline water mass is significant change in density as the temp decreases

Evaporation

How water mass and salt is lost from evaporation as the salinity is more dense precipitation effects:

on the Earth, mass, water covering surface, dense mass thermohaline circulation - is the difference in weight between the water, although density that affects the weight - as the water is getting denser and thermohaline weight

all parameters - composition, pressure, temperature
