Statistical concepts such as SD, standard error, or confidence interval are not strictly correct when applied to small populations (say, 100) that happen to have the same same population as others. Hence, there is a lot of confusion about what is a population of study. I believe that about 1 billion of 2.5 billion individuals are not identical (except identical twins) and the fact that the sample populations represent themselves, not (what others) does, that representation is not an advantage.
