November 2013 Physical Science Paper 1:

The Age of Scientific Naturalism Bernard Lightman, Michael S. Reidy, 2016-02-19 Physicist John Tyndall and his contemporaries were at the forefront of developing the cosmology of scientific naturalism during the Victorian period. They rejected all but physical laws as having any impact on the operations of human life and the universe. Contributors focus on the way Tyndall and his correspondents developed their ideas through letters, periodicals, and scientific journals, and challenge previously held assumptions about who gained authority and how they attained and defended their position within the scientific community.

What We Think About When We Try Not To Think About Global Warming Per Espen Stoknes, 2015. Today about 98 percent of scientists affirm that climate change is human made and about 2 percent still question it. Despite that overwhelming majority, though, about half the population of rich countries like ours choose to believe the 2 percent. And paradoxically, this large camp of deniers grows even larger as more and more alarming proof of climate change has cropped up over the last decades. This disconnect has both climate scientists and activists scratching their heads, growing anxious, and responding usually by repeating more facts to win the argument. But the more climate facts pile up, the greater the resistance to them grows, and the harder it becomes to enact measures to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and prepare communities for the inevitable change ahead. Is humanity up to the task? It is a catch 22 that starts, says psychologist and climate expert Per Espen Stoknes, from an inadequate understanding of the way most humans think, act, and live in the world around them. With dozens of examples, he shows how to retell the story of climate change and apply communication strategies more fit for the task. Publisher's description.
