

RATES OF REACTION

Section A: Summary Notes

Energy Changes during Chemical Reactions

- Most reactions do not begin until an amount of energy (activation energy) has been added to the reaction mixture.
- The activation energy is often called the 'energy hill' which must be 'overcome' by the addition of this amount of energy before a reaction can take place.
- When activation energy is added to the reactants, a so-called activated complex is formed.
- The activated complex is temporary, unstable, high-energy composition of atoms, which represents a transition state between reactants and the products.
- When the activated complex is formed during a reaction, this complex can lead either to the formation of new bonds, i.e. molecules of the products, or to re-formation of the old bonds, thereby returning to being reactants.
- For the reaction:

The formation of an activated complex as a transitional step can be represented as follows:

- When an activated complex is formed during a reaction, this complex can lead either to the formation of new bonds, i.e. molecules of the products or to the re-formation of the old bonds, thereby returning to being the reactants. This is reversibility for the reaction.

Heat of Reaction (Enthalpy)

- Heat of the reaction ( $\Delta H$ ) is the difference between the energy of the products and the energy of the reactants.

- For an endothermic reaction,  $E_{\text{products}} > E_{\text{reactants}}$ , therefore  $\Delta H$  is positive.

Note: In a reversible reaction, the energy released in forming the products in the forward reaction is the same as the activation energy ( $E_A$ ) of the reverse reaction.

- For an exothermic reaction,  $E_{\text{products}} < E_{\text{reactants}}$ ,  $\Delta H$  is negative.
