INTRODUCTION

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF PAUL HOLEMAN

Holeman was born in Madison, California, the son of an African American man and a white woman. Both of their parents moved to Seattle in the 1960s because of their father's job. Holeman grew up in a white neighborhood, attending private schools. He learned the value of hard work and integrity from his parents. He attended the University of Washington, where he studied for his Bachelor's degree in English. He then went on to study for his Master's in Creative Writing and his Ph.D. in English Literature at the University of Washington. He taught English for many years at the University of Washington. He is also a published author of several books, including Seedfolks. He is currently a professor of English at the University of Washington.

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Seedfolks is set in the 1990s, a time of social and economic change. The story takes place in a city where many people are struggling to make a living. The city is divided into different neighborhoods, each with its own problems. The story shows how a group of people from different backgrounds come together to create a community garden. This garden becomes a place where people can learn about each other and their own culture. It also shows how the garden can help people to overcome their problems and improve their lives.
