Notes: For each group, the number of correct and false judgments was calculated. The number of correct judgments was divided by the number of items in the list to obtain the proportion of correct judgments. The number of false judgments was divided by the number of items in the list to obtain the proportion of false judgments.

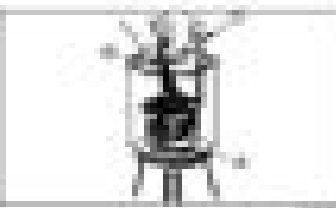

Fig. 1 Experimental design. The first 10 min of the 20-min test were used to determine the baseline heart rate (HR) and the baseline level of the dependent variables. The 10-min test was then divided into two 5-min periods. The first 5-min period was used to determine the effect of the intervention on the dependent variables. The second 5-min period was used to determine the effect of the intervention on the dependent variables.
