Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical performance of 10 male, sedentary, college students. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a diet group. The diet group was instructed to consume a diet that was 1000 kcal below their estimated maintenance level. The control group was instructed to consume a diet that was at their estimated maintenance level. The diet group lost significantly more weight and body fat than the control group. The diet group also showed a significant improvement in physical performance compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet can lead to significant improvements in body composition and physical performance in sedentary college students.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the work day.
 - Use red light for night shifts, as the length of the work day may be determined by the red light source's duration.
- The end of night shifts is important, as it may change the producer's circadian rhythm, producing a sleep deficit. The producer should be careful to get enough sleep, and to avoid alcohol, tobacco, and caffeine around the 50 percent mark.

Proper ventilation is critical to maintain proper ventilation. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a variety of problems with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, suppose the price for the product rises. The producer will want to produce more of the product, and this will be achieved by increasing the amount of inputs.
