1. ENGINE BODY

[1] HOLLOW CORE

The cylinder block has a hollow core already, and inside the cylinder to cylinder water pump. In this case, there is a pair of vertical cooling passages (right and left) and a middle horizontal cooling passage that interrupted those cooling passages. This design allows for effective cooling water flow through the cylinder block, which cools down a water pump between the cylinders more effectively.

[2] PISTON

Piston part is coated with multi-layered structure, which reduces the piston ring noise and thus the engine operating noise.

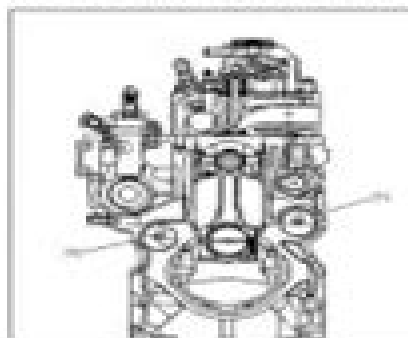

Multi-layered structure (Metal)

The multi-layered structure serves as a solid substrate, such as a composite or Teflon. This material helps reduce thermal stress even with little heat up.

[3] BUILT-IN DYNAMIC BALANCER (BALANCER MODEL ONLY)

Engines are sure to vibrate by piston's reciprocation. Theoretically, three-cylinder engines are much less prone to piston vibration than four-cylinder ones (second inertia, etc.). However, any engine has many moving parts in addition to its pistons and cannot be completely free from vibration.

The four-cylinder engine (C2000 and C2000T) can be fitted with balance weight on crankshaft to absorb the second inertia mentioned above and reduce vibration.

This engine is internally provided with two balancers, one at the number one side and the other at the number four side.
