Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or other medical problems. The subjects were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of activity. The subjects were monitored for HR and EE at baseline and at the end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on HR and EE. The HR of the training group decreased significantly from baseline to the end of the 10-week period, while the HR of the control group remained unchanged. The EE of the training group increased significantly from baseline to the end of the 10-week period, while the EE of the control group remained unchanged. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can effectively reduce HR and increase EE in sedentary, middle-aged women.
