Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 10-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 10-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in the experimental group also increased significantly. These findings suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the work day.
 - Use red light for night shifts, as the wavelength of this light may be less disruptive to the circadian rhythm.
- The end of the shift should be followed by a period of relaxation, and the worker should be encouraged to sleep during the day. The worker should be encouraged to sleep during the day. The worker should be encouraged to sleep during the day.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, suppose the price for the output rises. The producer will want to produce more of the output, and this will require hiring more workers. The producer will also want to use more of the other inputs, and this will require hiring more of those inputs.
