Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a submaximal exercise test at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during exercise compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve cardiovascular fitness in sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial or non-natural light sources. To avoid this, there are laws in the province that regulate the use of artificial light.
- Increased exposure to light will negatively affect the ability to absorb nutrients and vitamins, the length of the season may be reduced depending on the soil moisture availability.
- The end of the growing season is approaching, this may change the plant's natural life cycle, leading to a reduction in the quality of the harvest. It is important to take measures to avoid this, such as shading, but this is not possible for these types of agricultural systems. That's why we must protect the 50 plants a year.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program, while the control group remained sedentary. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly greater improvements in physical fitness and health-related quality of life compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary, middle-aged women.
