Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years of age, who were randomly selected from a health club. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of six women who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of six women who participated in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a stationary bike at a heart rate of 150 to 160 beats per minute. The subjects were monitored for HR and EE during the training program. The results of the study showed that the training group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The HR of the training group increased from 140 to 155 beats per minute, and the EE increased from 1,200 to 1,500 kcal per week. The control group showed no significant change in HR or EE. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.
