Nys Wic Income Guidelines 2012:

Lactivism Courtney Jung, 2015-11-24 Breastfeeding has become a moral imperative in 21st century America. Once upon a time this moral imperative made sense. Breastfeeding was believed to bring multiple health benefits including increased resistance to many chronic and even fatal diseases, protection against Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS), improved intelligence, and countless immunities. The irony now, however, is that breastfeeding continues to gain moral force just as scientists are showing that its benefits have been greatly exaggerated. In 2012, the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Center for Disease Control and Prevention declared the failure to breastfeed a public health issue, thus placing bottle feeding on par with smoking, obesity, and unsafe sex. Recently, politicians too have launched highly visible breastfeeding initiatives, such as former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg's well-publicized Latch On campaign. And meanwhile, women who don't breastfeed their babies have found themselves with a lot of explaining to do. Physicians, public health officials, and other mothers are pressuring them to breastfeed, even though the best science shows that the advantages of doing so are minimal at best. What is going on? In Lactivism, Courtney Jung offers the most deeply researched and far-reaching critique of the breastfeeding imperative to date. Drawing on a wide range of evidence from rigorously peer-reviewed scientific research to interviews with physicians, politicians, business interests, activists, social workers, and mothers from across the social and political spectrum, Jung presents an eye-opening account of how a practice that began as an alternative to Big Business has become Big Business itself.

Immigration and Social Capital in the Age of Social Media Joong-Hwan Oh, 2016-02-18 In this new age of social media, the role of online ethnic networks is as important as offline ethnic networks, families, friends, etc., in helping immigrants adjust to their new country. This is something that has received very little attention in the academic field of international immigration, which Oh hopes to rectify through this book. He focuses on the five American social institutions—immigration, welfare, education, housing, and finance—to explore this topic through the lens of married Korean American women. In their online MissyUSA community, the largest Korean American women's online community in North America, they share a wide range of information about the rules of each of these social institutions as they work together to navigate

American society Oh explores how the MissyUSA community creates two distinctive forms of social capital social resources and social support For some of its members inquirers or information seekers the MissyUSA community functions as an important source of their information social resources about the rules of the American social institutions Likewise it also functions as a network of social supporters respondents or information providers for those information seekers Here what makes this book a significant one is the fact that these social supporters are distinctively identified as instrumental guiders information describers expositors confirmers and advisors and emotional supporters companions encouragers and critics By researching the lives of Korean American women who are members of the MissyUSA community Oh s book works to understand how a sub set of the Korean American community shares information about American institutions and uses the internet to do so
