Once upon a time, there was a mischievous boy named Max. Max loved to play pranks. One day, he sneaked into his neighbor's house to see how he was going to do it without getting caught. Max had heard the story of the Trojan Horse from his older brother. He decided to try it. He took a box of his neighbor's toys and hid it in his room. He left for school the next day. When his neighbor came home, he found the box. He opened it and found a wooden horse. He was confused. He called his neighbor and told him about the horse. The neighbor went to the boy's room and found the box. He opened it and found the horse. He was angry. He called the police. The police came and took the horse away. Max was sad. PANDORA'S BOX

Once upon a sunny day, two kids, Jack and Lily, decided to play outside. They ran around, chasing each other and laughing their heads off. Eventually, they stumbled upon a rusty old box sitting under a tree. Excited to see what was inside, they pried it open. Inside the box were all sorts of toys and trinkets that they had never seen before. However, they also found a note that read: "Beware of the consequences! Ignoring the warning, the children played with the goodies until they accidentally knocked over an urn, releasing a swarm of angry bees. Quickly, they closed the box, hoping it would help, but it was too late. They were both covered in bee stings! From then on, they learned to always read the fine print before opening Pandora's Box."

What does the allusion, opening Pandora's Box, mean? Misbehaving. A temptation can lead to trouble. Worry about what you are doing.
