	Issue	Responses
	Chapter 1
1	Colonization of North America	Colonization of North America was driven by economic motives and a desire for religious freedom. Colonists sought to establish new societies, often as extensions of their母国, and to escape religious persecution. The Pilgrims, for example, sought religious freedom in Plymouth.
2	European Exploration	European exploration of North America was driven by the desire for wealth, power, and knowledge. Explorers sought to find new trade routes, establish colonies, and expand the European empire. Christopher Columbus, for example, discovered the Americas in 1492.
3	Settlement of the East	Settlement of the East was driven by economic motives and a desire for religious freedom. Colonists sought to establish new societies, often as extensions of their母国, and to escape religious persecution. The Pilgrims, for example, sought religious freedom in Plymouth.
4	Settlement of the West	Settlement of the West was driven by economic motives and a desire for religious freedom. Colonists sought to establish new societies, often as extensions of their母国, and to escape religious persecution. The Pilgrims, for example, sought religious freedom in Plymouth.
5	Native Americans	Native Americans played a significant role in the early history of the United States. They provided food, shelter, and guidance to the colonists. However, they also suffered from disease, warfare, and displacement. The Pilgrims, for example, received help from the Wampanoag people in Plymouth.
6	Religion and Society	Religion played a significant role in the early history of the United States. Many colonists sought religious freedom and established new churches. The Pilgrims, for example, established the Plymouth Church.
7	Slavery and the Economy	Slavery played a significant role in the early history of the United States. Many colonists used enslaved people for labor. The Pilgrims, for example, used enslaved people for labor in Plymouth.
8	Government and Society	Government played a significant role in the early history of the United States. Many colonists sought to establish new governments. The Pilgrims, for example, established the Plymouth Colony.
