

PHOTOLYSE STEMS AND LEAVES

Plants have structures that allow them to absorb light energy and convert it into glucose and oxygen.

Light energy from the sun is used to make glucose.

There are two main types of photosynthesis:

- C₃ pathway (most common)
- C₄ pathway (more common in hot climates)
- CAM pathway (common in desert plants)

Photosynthesis occurs in the chloroplasts of plant cells.

Chloroplasts are organelles found in plant cells. They contain chlorophyll, the green pigment that allows plants to absorb light energy. Chloroplasts are found in the mesophyll cells of the leaf.

Glucose is used for energy.

Glucose is used for energy in two ways: it can be used immediately for energy, or it can be stored in the form of starch. Starch is a polysaccharide made of glucose units. Plants store starch in the roots and tubers. Glucose is also used for the synthesis of other organic molecules, such as amino acids and nucleic acids.
