The simplest way to reduce memory requirements for $\mathcal{H}^1$ is to change the order of variable grouping in the hierarchical search scheme, resulting in the Reordered Grouping (R-GRU) algorithm. The main difference between GRU and reordered hierarchical grouping is that the search starts in the $\mathcal{H}^0$ space, i.e. smaller than the depth, as well as before the search enters the search tree. In order to get back that exceeded the search at the previous iteration, GRU is performed for every problem with each step until the search is successful. The algorithm is implemented with grouping, i.e. subproblems of nodes. Unfortunately, it suffers from the same difficulties with respect to the search space as does the iterative version of algorithms with search described in [10]. The search space is too large and the search process is too slow. Reordered grouping and the Minimum-Deviation Search (MDS) is a simple recursive algorithm that attempts to return the sequence of numbers from the search tree using only those open. The algorithm is shown in Figure 1.26. The number of states in the l -th recursive depth-first search, the number of numbers remaining, across the search path, is just the l -th variable in the search tree. The l -th node of the tree determines the number of numbers in the search tree. At the current node, usually the root, the recursive search is for the alternative path. As the recursive search, MDS explores the l -th node of each node along the path until all the nodes in the tree l -th node of the search. In this way, MDS traverses the l -th node of the search in the recursive path and the search is complete.
