implications of both of these assessments on ethnically diverse populations provides a clear link between assessment evidence based interventions and the RTI model and considers other important topics related to this area such as teacher behavior. Intended primarily for graduate level courses in education school psychology or child clinical psychology it will also be of interest to practicing professionals in these fields. Transforming Schools Using Project-Based Learning, Performance Assessment, and Common Core Standards Bob Lenz, Justin Wells, Sally Kingston, 2015-01-27 It's not what students know but what they do with what they know that is important. Schools are changing in response to this reality and in Transforming Schools Using Project Based Learning Performance Assessment and Common Core Standards Bob Lenz, Justin Wells and Sally Kingston draw on the example of the Envision Education schools as well as other leading schools around the country to show how the concept of deeper learning can meet the need for students who are both college and career ready and engaged in their own education. In this book the authors explain how project based learning can blend with Common Core aligned performance assessment for deeper learning. You'll discover how many schools have successfully made the transition from traditional teacher centered learning to project based deeper learning and find many practical ideas for implementation. Companion DVD and website include videos showing how to implement deeper learning strategies in the classroom. Evidence based descriptions show why deeper learning is right for students. Performance assessment experts explain how to align assessments with Common Core by shifting the emphasis from knowing to doing. Extensive game plan section provides step by step guidance for change. Schools are complex organizations and transformation involves all of the stakeholders from students to superintendents. But as this book shows there are amazing benefits to be realized when everyone commits to diving deeper into learning. The Long Shadow Karl Alexander, Doris Entwistle, Linda Olson, 2014-05-31 A volume in the American Sociological Association's Rose Series in Sociology West Baltimore stands out in the popular imagination as the quintessential inner city gritty run down and marred by drugs and gang violence. Indeed with the collapse of manufacturing jobs in the 1970s the area experienced a rapid onset of poverty and high unemployment with few public resources available to alleviate economic distress. But in stark contrast to the image of a perpetual urban underclass depicted in television by shows like The Wire sociologists Karl Alexander, Doris Entwistle and Linda Olson present a more nuanced portrait of Baltimore's inner city residents that employs important new research on the significance of early life opportunities available to low income populations. The Long Shadow focuses on children who grew up in west Baltimore neighborhoods and others like them throughout the city tracing how their early lives in the inner city have affected their long term well being. Although research for this book was conducted in Baltimore that city's struggles with deindustrialization, white flight and concentrated poverty were characteristic of most East Coast and Midwest manufacturing cities. The experience of Baltimore's children who came of age during this era is mirrored in the experiences of urban children across the nation. For 25 years the authors of The Long Shadow tracked the life progress of a group of almost 800 predominantly low income Baltimore school children through the Beginning School Study Youth Panel BSSYP The study monitored the children s transitions to young adulthood with special attention to how opportunities available to them as early as first grade shaped their socioeconomic status as adults The authors fine grained analysis confirms that the children who lived in more cohesive neighborhoods had stronger families and attended better schools tended to maintain a higher economic status later in life As young adults they held higher income jobs and had achieved more personal milestones such as marriage than their lower status counterparts Differences in race and gender further stratified life opportunities for the Baltimore children As one of the first studies to closely examine the outcomes of inner city whites in addition to African Americans data from the BSSYP shows that by adulthood white men of lower status family background despite attaining less education on average were more likely to be employed than any other group in part due to family connections and long standing racial biases in Baltimore s industrial economy Gender imbalances were also evident the women who were more likely to be working in low wage service and clerical jobs earned less than men African American women were doubly disadvantaged insofar as they were less likely to be in a stable relationship than white women and therefore less likely to benefit from a second income Combining original interviews with Baltimore families teachers and other community members with the empirical data gathered from the authors groundbreaking research The Long Shadow unravels the complex connections between socioeconomic origins and socioeconomic destinations to reveal a startling and much needed examination of who succeeds and why
