Procedure Rules for Residents

Procedures not listed above always require direct supervision by a credentialed attending physician.

Once this form has been submitted, the resident may perform the specified procedure under indirect supervision and provide direct supervision of the procedure to other residents.

When performing a procedure under indirect supervision, the resident must verify with a credentialed attending that the procedure is indicated prior to performing the procedure.

Residents in their first 12 months of training must have every procedure supervised directly, even after completion of this form.

If an attending is available to supervise a procedure, the resident should invite them to do so for purposes of teaching and billing, even if indirect supervision is allowed.
