Statistical Analysis
Descriptive statistics were calculated for each variable. The chi-square test was used to compare the proportion of subjects in each group who had a positive result for each variable. The Fisher's exact test was used when the expected cell count was less than 5. The odds ratio (OR) and 95% confidence interval (CI) were calculated for each variable. The OR was used to estimate the relative risk of a positive result for each variable. The 95% CI was used to estimate the precision of the OR. The p-value was used to estimate the probability of a positive result for each variable. The p-value was calculated using the chi-square test or Fisher's exact test, depending on the expected cell count. The p-value was used to estimate the probability of a positive result for each variable. The p-value was calculated using the chi-square test or Fisher's exact test, depending on the expected cell count.
