

Moon Note-Taking Guide

Why do we see the same face of the moon?

Although the moon rotates around its axis at the same rate that it orbits Earth, we always see the same side of the moon. This is because the moon is tidally locked to Earth. As the moon orbits Earth, it also rotates on its axis at the same rate. This means that the same side of the moon always faces Earth.

The moon's rotation is synchronized with its orbit around Earth. This is why we always see the same side of the moon. The moon's rotation is not perfectly synchronized with its orbit, but the difference is so small that it is not noticeable to the naked eye.

The Moon

The moon is the only natural satellite of Earth. It is a rocky body that orbits Earth at an average distance of 384,400 kilometers. The moon is about 1/4 the size of Earth and is the only celestial body in the solar system that we can see with the naked eye.

The moon's surface is covered in craters, mountains, and valleys. The most prominent features are the maria, which are large, dark, basaltic plains. The maria were formed by volcanic activity that occurred billions of years ago. The moon's surface is also covered in a layer of dust and small rocks called regolith.

The moon's atmosphere is extremely thin and is composed of oxygen, nitrogen, and other gases. The moon's magnetic field is also very weak. The moon's internal structure is not well understood, but it is believed to have a solid inner core and a molten outer core.
