Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of physical activity, while the exercise group was instructed to engage in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a stationary bike at a heart rate of 150 to 160 beats per minute. The subjects were monitored throughout the study using a heart rate monitor and a metabolic cart. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The HR of the exercise group increased from 140 to 150 beats per minute, while the HR of the control group remained at 140 beats per minute. The EE of the exercise group increased from 1,800 to 2,200 kcal per day, while the EE of the control group remained at 1,800 kcal per day. These results suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively increase the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: This research was an exploratory study to determine the relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of the Internet for business purposes. The study was conducted using a survey of 100 business owners. The results of the study indicate that the use of the Internet for business purposes is positively related to the use of the Internet for personal purposes. The study also found that the use of the Internet for business purposes is positively related to the use of the Internet for social purposes. The study was limited by the use of a convenience sample and the use of a self-reported measure of Internet use.

When you visit the Facebook website, you will see that there are 45,000,000 members on the site. That's a lot of members. But how many of those members are actually using the site? That's a different question. And the answer is, "Not many." In fact, only about 10% of the members are using the site. That's a pretty low number, especially considering that the site has been around for over 10 years.
