

GLYCOLYSIS AND FERMENTATION

All cells break down complex organic compounds into simpler molecules. Cells use some of the energy that is released in this process to make ATP.

HARVESTING CHEMICAL ENERGY

You learned in Chapter 6 that autotrophs, such as plants, use photosynthesis to convert light energy from the sun into chemical energy, which is stored in carbohydrates and other organic compounds. Both autotrophs and heterotrophs depend on these organic compounds for the energy to power cellular activities. By breaking down these compounds into simpler molecules, cells release energy. Some of the energy is used to make ATP from ADP and phosphate. Remember from Chapter 3 that ATP is the main energy currency of cells. The complex process in which cells make ATP by breaking down organic compounds is known as cellular respiration.

As you can see in Figure 7-1, cellular respiration begins with a biochemical pathway called glycolysis (GOL-uh-luh-sis), which yields a relatively small amount of ATP. The other products of glycolysis can follow either of two main pathways, depending on whether there is oxygen in the cell. If oxygen is absent, the products of glycolysis may enter fermentation pathways that yield no

OBJECTIVES

Define cellular respiration.

Describe the major events in glycolysis.

Compare and contrast lactic acid fermentation and alcoholic fermentation.

Calculate the efficiency of glycolysis.

Cellular respiration harvests the energy in organic compounds to produce ATP. The initial pathway is glycolysis, which produces ATP. Glycolysis produces a small amount of ATP. Glycolysis can lead to fermentation if oxygen is absent. In the aerobic respiration pathway, a much larger amount of ATP is produced as glucose is completely oxidized to carbon dioxide and water.
