WORKSHEET

Global Population Distribution

Global population distribution shows where people live and how they are distributed. It is the study of the factors that influence where people live.

Population Density

- Population density is the number of people living in a given area.
- It is measured in people per square kilometre (ppk).
- It is calculated by dividing the total population by the total area.
- It is a measure of how crowded a place is.
- It is a measure of how many people live in a given area.

Population Density and Distribution

Some areas of the world are densely populated (crowded), while others are sparsely populated (empty). This is due to a variety of factors.

Factors influencing where people live:

• Climate: Some areas are too hot or too cold for people to live in. Some areas are too dry or too wet.

• Economic activities: Some areas are more developed than others. Some areas have more jobs and services than others.

• Services: Some areas have more schools, hospitals, and other services than others.

• Relief: Some areas are more hilly or mountainous than others. Some areas are more flat than others.

• Accessibility: Some areas are easier to reach than others. Some areas are more isolated than others.

• Population density: Some areas have more people than others. Some areas have fewer people than others.
