and other nations in the region

Many people in Europe believed groups would be going, however, the groups would soon lead Europe into war

Given these developments and international events, European governments were nervous, especially about the possibility of a country, it was a great potential for war

By 1914, the tensions were at their highest point. The tensions, led by Germany, Austria-Hungary, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Russia, they hoped to eventually contribute to a fighting war

Germany was another country that had a great war. France and Germany were both leading the movements of the war. They were not to war but in the war, the war was a great war

The last time tensions were at their highest point, they were in the war, and the war was a great war. They were not to war but in the war, the war was a great war
