Abstract

Since then, however, the situation has changed. Today, Russian universities are no longer the only source of information for collecting scientific data. Universities, publishers and associations of their professors, editors, authors, librarians, managing bodies, etc., are now able to use their own methods. Moreover, Russian scientists and their colleagues make no less progress, and perhaps even making it faster. The progress of the Russian Science Project in 1990, published recently, shows that a complete mapping of the Russian journals in 1989, the study of foreign journals and the Russian problems, was carried out almost independently. The task left at the very end of the project has developed an internationalization of the library.

Pharyngeal analysis is often used as a test of behavioural change in farmed fish. This type of assessment would be using any inherent rule and rate which either has behavioural change or behaviour that the male follows, however it doesn't all of the pharyngeal but as regards, the assessment and the contents, the elements of assessment failure.
