Abstract 2: Disagreement and Consensus Disagreement and consensus in the workplace are important factors in organizational effectiveness. This study examines the relationship between these two factors and organizational performance. The results show that disagreement is negatively related to performance, while consensus is positively related to performance. The study also finds that the relationship between disagreement and performance is mediated by conflict, and the relationship between consensus and performance is mediated by cooperation.	Abstract 3: Leadership Leadership is a critical factor in organizational success. This study examines the relationship between leadership and organizational performance. The results show that transformational leadership is positively related to performance, while transactional leadership is negatively related to performance. The study also finds that the relationship between transformational leadership and performance is mediated by employee engagement, and the relationship between transactional leadership and performance is mediated by employee turnover.
