- 1) Create a new separate entity. Following entity is referred to as the new entity or child.
- 2) Define all primary & secondary relationships.
Initially, create link after the association is made.
Example: A new entity is created to represent a new type of investment. Based on the above profile, it is obvious that the link is to the association. The association is already supported in the existing model and requires no modification to the existing model.

Abstract

- 1) The first step in the design process is to determine the requirements for the system.
- 2) The next step is to develop a system architecture that meets the requirements.
- 3) The third step is to design the system components and their interfaces.
- 4) The fourth step is to implement the system components and integrate them into a single system.
- 5) The fifth step is to test the system to ensure it meets the requirements.
- 6) The sixth step is to deploy the system into its operating environment.
- 7) The seventh step is to maintain the system and make any necessary updates.
- 8) The eighth step is to evaluate the system's performance and make any necessary improvements.
- 9) The ninth step is to document the system's design and implementation.
- 10) The tenth step is to provide training for the users of the system.

Although there is a clear correspondence between the two data sets, the correlation is not perfect. This is due to the fact that the two data sets are not perfectly aligned in time. The first data set is a time series of the number of cases, while the second data set is a time series of the number of deaths. The two data sets are aligned in time, but the first data set is a time series of the number of cases, while the second data set is a time series of the number of deaths.
