Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or other medical problems. The subjects were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group was instructed to maintain their current level of activity. The subjects were monitored for HR and EE at baseline and at 4, 8, and 12 weeks. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on HR and EE. The HR of the training group decreased significantly from baseline to 12 weeks, while the HR of the control group remained unchanged. The EE of the training group increased significantly from baseline to 12 weeks, while the EE of the control group remained unchanged. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will increase its output level. This is because the producer's marginal revenue curve shifts up, and the producer will increase its output level until its marginal revenue is equal to its marginal cost.
