

PHET Magnetism - Lab Guide

Part 1

Today you will be exploring magnets and electromagnets through a simulation provided by the University of Colorado at Boulder.

1. Click "understanding" under "magnets" (see: "Magnets and Electromagnets" below) and then "magnets" (see: "magnets" under "magnets" and "electromagnets" under "magnets").

2. Move the compass slowly along a circle around the wire loop. What happens when you get to the other side of the loop? What happens when you get to the other side of the loop?

The compass has the ability to flip and rotate. This indicates that the wire loop is not just a simple wire, but a magnet. This is because the wire loop has a north and south pole, and the compass needle is attracted to the north pole.

3. What happens when the compass needle is at the top of the wire loop?

The compass needle is attracted to the north pole of the wire loop.

4. What is the strength of the magnetic field in the wire loop?

It is approximately 0.0001 Tesla.

5. What is the relationship between the magnetic field (indicated) and the charge (current)?

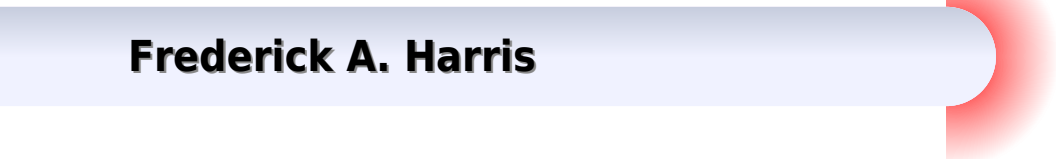

We know that the magnetic field is created by the current. The magnetic field is proportional to the current. The magnetic field is also proportional to the distance from the wire.

6. Move the compass along a circular path around the wire loop. What happens when you get to the other side of the loop? What happens when you get to the other side of the loop?

The compass needle is attracted to the north pole of the wire loop. The magnetic field is proportional to the current. The magnetic field is also proportional to the distance from the wire.
