FORD MOTOR SERVICE INTERNATIONAL (FORD MOTOR COMPANY)

SPECIAL PINTO PERFORMANCE TRAINING PROGRAM

INTRODUCTION
The Pinto Performance Training Program is designed to provide the technician with the knowledge and skills necessary to diagnose and repair the various performance problems that may occur on the Pinto. This program is divided into two main sections: the first section covers the basic principles of engine operation and the second section covers the specific components and systems that make up the Pinto's performance system.

ENGINE OPERATION
The engine is the heart of the vehicle and is responsible for converting the chemical energy of the fuel into mechanical energy. The process of combustion is a complex one, involving the intake of air and fuel, the compression of the mixture, and the ignition of the mixture by the spark plug. The resulting explosion forces the piston down, which in turn forces the crankshaft to rotate, thereby producing power.

INTAKE SYSTEM
The intake system is responsible for drawing air into the engine. It consists of the air filter, the carburetor, and the intake manifold. The air filter is designed to remove any dirt or debris that might enter the engine. The carburetor is responsible for mixing the air with the fuel, and the intake manifold is responsible for distributing the mixture to the cylinders.

COMPRESSION SYSTEM
The compression system is responsible for compressing the air-fuel mixture. It consists of the pistons, the connecting rods, and the crankshaft. The pistons are designed to move up and down, compressing the mixture as they move up. The connecting rods connect the pistons to the crankshaft, which is responsible for converting the up-and-down motion of the pistons into a rotating motion.

IGNITION SYSTEM
The ignition system is responsible for igniting the air-fuel mixture. It consists of the spark plug, the distributor, and the ignition coil. The spark plug is designed to create a spark that ignites the mixture. The distributor is responsible for distributing the spark to the correct cylinder at the correct time. The ignition coil is responsible for providing the high voltage necessary to create the spark.
