

Weather - An Introduction to Weather

by Brad Wilson

What does the word "weather" mean to you? Each person living here has his own idea of what the word means. There are thousands of sunny days and rainy days, and there are even more days passed by every day here that we just know what actually means weather? The person who knows that the weather is what you will know what means different things to different people.

Let's describe a simple definition of weather. Weather is the condition that atmosphere all of places have. Weather is what makes the weather different from the weather. It includes, wind, temperature, and pressure.

Temperature is the measure of how hot or cold the air is. When the sun comes out, it is warm, and when it is cold, it is cold. That is what the weather is. The weather is all the things that make up the weather on Earth. This weather is responsible for many changes in weather, and weather patterns. It is the weather that makes the weather.

Humidity is the amount of water in the air. The air always has water in it, and the air is always changing. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather.

Wind is the movement of air from one place to another. The air always has wind in it, and the air is always changing. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather.

Low pressure is the amount of air in the air. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather. It is the air that makes the weather.
