

MUSCULAR SYSTEM OF A BIRD

There are around 175 muscles in the bird's body; they are responsible for everything from flight to involuntary movements, to mating and defense calls. The muscular system in birds lay in order of growth, so as to make flight all the more efficient.

The central point of a bird's muscular system are those surrounding the keel.

- Supracoracoideus

The muscle that raises the wing - acts as the antagonist to the pectoralis. This muscle is located below the pectoral muscles ventrally (on the front side). Together, these two muscles constitute about 25 to 35 percent of a bird's body weight. Besides the supracoracoideus there are numerous other small muscles of the wing that allow a bird to control flight. Other muscles that play a critical role in flight are the clax muscles. The involuntary clax muscles, for example, which are attached to almost every feather follicle, can raise, lower, or move feathers sideways to assist a bird in its flight movements. The trunk and tail muscles are few, but extremely mobile and complex. One of these muscles, the pygo style, supports the tail feathers and controls their entire range of movement.

- Pectoralis

The muscles which furnish the propelling force to the wings are those of breast, the pectoralis major and the pectoralis minor. The pectoralis major is a large, winglike muscle forming the principal part of the bulk of the breast. It arises from the ribs, from the outer portion of the ventral surface of the sternum, from the side of the keel of the sternum, from the furcula and the membrane connecting the furcula with the sternum and the coracoid. The fibers converge, the outer running under the minor and covered by a tendon on the greater tuberosity of the humerus. In action, this muscle depresses the wing and thus furnishes the great motive power of flight.

The pectoralis minor is much smaller than the preceding, and beneath it, arising from the middle portion of the sternum and the membrane connecting the furcula to the sternum and the coracoid. Its fibers converging terminate in a tendon which, after passing through the end of the coracoid, is inserted on the inner side of the greater tuberosity of the humerus. This muscle, together with the contracting force of the air, elevates the wing after it has been depressed.

- Biceps

The function of the biceps muscle is the elbow flexion or the moving of the arm.

- Triceps

Triceps strengthens the arm of the bird that is under or below its wings.

- Thigh

The position of the thigh bone and muscles in birds is critical to their long function, which is seen in what gives them enough long capacity for flight.

- Leg Muscles

Leg muscles enable birds to move by walking, running, skipping and sometimes swimming. The functional maturity of leg muscles sets an upper limit to growth rate that some of birds grow more slowly.
