Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the day.
 - Use red light for night time. Red light has the least effect on the circadian rhythm.
- The end of the day is important for the circadian rhythm. The producer should make sure that the plants have a dark period of at least 8 hours. If the producer cannot provide this, the plants will not be able to grow properly.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 combinations for One Connection) will void the warranty. Please, before installing, refer to the correct installation instructions. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a variety of problems with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.

Future Research

Abstract: This research was designed to investigate the effects of two types of social support on the well-being of individuals who are experiencing a chronic illness. The study was conducted in a community-based setting and involved 100 participants who were divided into four groups based on the type of social support they received. The results showed that individuals who received emotional support experienced significantly higher levels of psychological well-being compared to those who did not receive such support. Additionally, individuals who received instrumental support experienced significantly higher levels of physical well-being compared to those who did not receive such support. These findings suggest that social support plays a crucial role in promoting the well-being of individuals with chronic illnesses.
