Rain, Rain, Go Away

1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be changed.

TABLE 1. Salmonella serotypes isolated from cattle and sheep in the United Kingdom, 1990-1999

As previously mentioned, the first two steps of the process are the most important. The first step is to identify the problem. This is done by gathering information about the problem and its causes. The second step is to analyze the problem. This is done by breaking the problem down into smaller parts and identifying the relationships between them. The third step is to develop a solution. This is done by brainstorming ideas and selecting the best one. The fourth step is to implement the solution. This is done by putting the solution into action and monitoring its progress. The fifth step is to evaluate the solution. This is done by comparing the results of the solution to the original problem and determining if the solution was successful.

Extracellular Matrix Protocols Charles Streuli, Michael Grant, 2008-02-05 It is now widely accepted that much of the dynamic function of cells and tissues is regulated from outside the cell by the extracellular matrix In addition to its conventional role in providing a scaffold for building tissues the extracellular matrix acts as a directional highway for cellular movement and provides instructional information for promoting survival proliferation and differentiation Indeed the extracellular matrix is beginning to take a starring role in the choreography of cell and tissue function The diverse roles of the extracellular matrix are reflected in its highly complicated structure consisting of an ever increasing number of components Yet the mechanisms of extracellular matrix assembly and how they influences cell behavior are only just beginning to be understood In order to solve these problems new methodologies are of necessity being developed Many of these technologies are highly sophisticated and are currently available only in a ha ful of laboratories However we believe that they can readily be transported and established by other researchers Thus the purpose of Extracellular Matrix Protocols is to present some of these complicated techniques in a style that is relatively easy to reproduce Electronic Measurements and Instrumentation Uday A.
