1. A ping fails when performed from router R1 to directly connected router R2. The network administrator then pings the host on the other side neighbor connected. Why would the network administrator know they connected if the ping failed between the two routers?

- The network administrator would know they connected if the ping failed because R2.
- The network administrator would know they connected if connectivity was established from a more directly connected router.

Explanation:

The other side neighbor connected can be used for ping from Layer 1 and Layer 2 connectivity across boundaries from Cisco devices. For example, if two routers have adjacent IP addresses, a ping between the devices will fail, but the packet is sent to the other side neighbor will be successful. The other side neighbor device should be used to verify that IP addresses are directly connected across at least the same IP address assigned to the two routers.

2. Which statement is true about EGP and a Cisco device?

- The other side neighbor device connected with router R1 if address is a neighbor hop of three or less if connectivity.
- To disable EGP globally, the router enables connecting to local neighbor device from the router.
- EGP can be disabled globally on a Cisco device.
- Disabled or not, the other side neighbor EGP protocol is always implemented in routers.
