The European Voter Jacques Thomassen,2005-07-28 This book provides a systematic comparative analysis of how and why voting behaviour has changed in Europe in recent decades It has been widely argued that radical changes have occurred in the how and why of voting behaviour in Europe as a result of changes in the structure of society most notably the rise in material affluence and educational attainment and the decline in religious observance and the size of the working class But most tests of this proposition have been undertaken on single countries This book however systematically tests the validity of this proposition across various European countries The argument that social change has altered voting behaviour has been increasingly challenged on the grounds that it takes too little account of changes in the choices that are put before voters by the parties such as the promises and proposals that are put forward at election time This book therefore also assesses the relative explanatory power of claims that voting behaviour has changed because of changes in society against claims that it responds to changes in the offerings of political parties And it is clear from the analyses reported in this book that contrary to the claims of much of the extant literature the latter argument appears better able to account for many of the patterns and changes in European voting behaviour and thus the book constitutes an important challenge to much current academic orthodoxy This is the first book to provide a systematic comparison of the long term dynamics of the voting behaviour of individual voters across such a wide range of European countries taking into account the dynamics of the choices put before voters by the parties and for the first time relating this to the way voters behave Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics The General Editors are Max Kaase Professor of Political Science Vice President and Dean School of Humanities and Social Science International University Bremen and Kenneth Newton Professor of Comparative Politics University of Southampton The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research

E.M. Deems Holy days,1902 Organizational Learning as Relational Governance Jessica Geraldo Schwengber,2024-03-07

This book critically examines existing organizational learning theories that often center on employees and adopt a neo classical organizational view In this book organizational learning OL is conceptualized from a relational governance perspective Departing from the relational economics approach it describes organizations as dynamic nexuses of stakeholders resources and interests extending beyond conventional intra organizational contexts to encompass an open systems view By viewing organizations as independent entities distinct from individual stakeholders the author introduces the concept of transactions as the fundamental unit of analysis in organization theory Stakeholders contribute diverse rationalities and OL emerges as the process of relationalizing these rationalities enabling multi contextual transactions within organizations This book sheds light on epistemological and ontological challenges in OL literature such as the OL paradox and anthropomorphism To address these issues the author advocates a shift from methodological individualism to methodological relationism wherein OL becomes a micro meso relational process involving both stakeholders and the organization as an entity Combining conceptual insights with empirical evidence from a multinational company s case study the book showcases how relational learning can be practically applied in organizations The findings corroborate the conceptual framework supporting the notion of organizations as resource rich nexuses and learning as a comprehensive relational process involving both entities and stakeholders This book offers an essential contribution to the field It appeals to scholars and practitioners interested in organizational studies corporate governance and relational economics
