

PRESCHOOL HOME PROJECTS SAMPLE LETTER TO PARENTS

Dear Parents,

We're excited to announce some fun, educational home projects for your preschooler! These activities will reinforce what we're learning in class. They're designed to be engaging and easy to do at home.

This month's focus is on shapes and colors. We'll be working on identifying different shapes and learning their names. Your child will also be exploring a variety of colors and learning to mix them.

Please feel free to contact us if you have any questions or need further clarification.

We look forward to seeing the amazing creations your child makes!

Sincerely,

The Preschool Team

Sample Preschool Letters To Parents:

Implementing Positive Behavior Support Systems in Early Childhood and Elementary Settings Melissa Stormont, 2008 The book's strengths are its practical information and the specific ways of looking at expectations and developing a common language The forms included will be of great benefit to school teams Susan Safarik Supervisor Department of Special Education Lincoln Public Schools NE Provides a lot of research and breaks down the processes for implementing positive behavior supports effectively in schools Step by step directions sample forms and examples make the processes easy to incorporate and understand Julia DeGarmo Special Education Specialist Columbus City Schools OH Learn how to teach and support appropriate behavior and build confidence in young children This easy to read resource presents the Programwide Schoolwide Positive Behavioral Support PW SW PBS system a preventive research based approach that helps educators teach classroom behavior skills the same way they teach academic skills The authors outline the PW SW PBS model describe the core practices and provide case examples to aid implementation Key features of this instruction based system include Differing levels of intervention to meet individual student needs Clearly stated behavioral expectations Consistent acknowledgment of students mastery of expectations Systematic use of consequences for problem behavior This user friendly text makes the principles of PW SW PBS easy to apply for educators who are committed to helping young students establish positive behavioral habits that will make learning a joy for all Literacy, Home and School Peter Hannon, 2013-10-14 Parental involvement in the teaching of reading and writing has often lagged behind practice though schools in many countries now recognise the importance of parental involvement The ideas presented in this book offer new ways of thinking about parental involvement and should interest both researchers and practitioners It relates the recent growth of involvement to broader considerations of the nature of literacy and historical exclusion of parents from the curriculum Descriptions are given of key findings from research into pre school literacy work with parents and parents hearing children read and a framework to underpin practice is offered The author gives a critique of evaluation methods in the field and suggests how parental involvement should be evaluated together with a view of research findings to date and issues needing further study The book concludes with an appraisal of what was learned from research and what needs further enquiry Frontiers in the Acquisition of Literacy Claire M. Fletcher-Flinn, 2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science experimental psychology and education The purpose of this Research Topic is to summarize and review what has been accomplished so far and to further explore these general issues Contributions from different perspectives are welcomed and could include theoretical computational and empirical works that focus on the acquisition of literacy including cross orthographic research

Partnering with Parents Mary Schreiber, 2019-04-01 Caregiver involvement is key to a child s reading success story and libraries are in the perfect position to provide the guidance needed for parents and caregivers to embrace their role as their children s first and most enduring teachers Libraries offer many programs and services for children but sometimes caregivers are left out of the equation especially once children start school Nevertheless parents and caregivers are an integral part of literacy development and libraries are a great place for them to witness modeling practices and participate in engaging family programs that encourage early literacy Mary Schreiber combines personal experience and professional research with the programming expertise of youth librarians from across the country in this guide for libraries looking to make an even greater impact on the level of literacy attained by the children they serve In Partnering with Parents readers will find a wealth of information on how to talk to caregivers about the different stages of a child s reading life what books to recommend to excite both caregivers and children about reading and ways to encourage parent and caregiver participation in library programming with additional information on working with and providing programming for diverse families Whether you are a veteran in the profession or brand new to working with families you will find something in this book that will help you to make your library a more integral part of the education community The Science of Reading Margaret J.
