Nisa The Life And Words Of A Kung Woman:

Nisa Marjorie Shostak, Nisa, 1990 First Published in 1990 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company

Nisa Marjorie Shostak, 2015-10-29 Married at twelve then separated divorced and widowed Nisa is the mother of four children none of whom survived She is strong capable of foraging on her own in one of the world's most hostile environments not dependent on any man for her daily sustenance and ready to talk to anyone as her equal Wise full of humour at the absurdities of life and courageous in the face of its defeats she is bawdy practical and incurably romantic She is a woman of the Khung people who live by means of humanity's oldest survival strategy gathering and hunting This book is the remarkable story of Nisa's life told in her own words to Marjorie Shostak It is a story full of echoes from a female past that we can never know directly But it is also Nisa's unique story her own voice her own dignity In anyone's culture she is a remarkable woman Nisa, the Life and Words of A Kung Woman Marjorie Shostak, 2000 Nisa Marjorie

Shostak, 1981-10-30 This is the story of the life of Nisa a member of the Kung tribe of hunter gatherers from southern Africa's Kalahari desert Told in her own words earthy emotional vivid to an anthropologist who succeeded with Nisa's collaboration in breaking through the barriers of language and culture the story is a fascinating view of a remarkable woman The

Chicago Guide to Collaborative Ethnography Luke E. Lassiter, 2005-09-15 Collaboration between ethnographers and subjects has long been a product of the close intimate relationships that define ethnographic research But increasingly collaboration is no longer viewed as merely a consequence of fieldwork instead collaboration now preconditions and shapes research design as well as its dissemination As a result ethnographic subjects are shifting from being informants to being consultants The emergence of collaborative ethnography highlights this relationship between consultant and ethnographer moving it to center stage as a calculated part not only of fieldwork but also of the writing process itself The Chicago Guide to Collaborative Ethnography presents a historical theoretical and practice oriented road map for this shift from incidental collaboration to a more conscious and explicit collaborative strategy Luke Eric Lassiter charts the history of collaborative ethnography from its earliest implementation to its contemporary emergence in fields such as feminism humanistic anthropology and critical ethnography On this historical and theoretical base Lassiter outlines concrete steps for achieving a more deliberate and overt collaborative practice throughout the processes of fieldwork and writing As a participatory action situated in the ethical commitments between ethnographers and consultants and focused on the co construction of texts collaborative ethnography argues Lassiter is among the most powerful ways to press ethnographic fieldwork and writing into the service of an applied and public scholarship A comprehensive and highly accessible handbook for ethnographers of all stripes The Chicago Guide to Collaborative Ethnography will become a fixture in the development of a critical practice of anthropology invaluable to both undergraduates graduate students and faculty alike Return to Nisa Marjorie

Shostak, 2009-06-01 The story of two women one a hunter gatherer in Botswana the other an ailing American anthropologist

this powerful book returns the reader to territory that Marjorie Shostak wrote of so poignantly in the now classic Nisa: The Life and Words of a Kung Woman. Here however the ground has perceptibly shifted. First published in 1981, Nisa served as a stirring introduction to anthropology's most basic question: Can there be true understanding between people of profoundly different cultures? Diagnosed with breast cancer and troubled by a sense of work yet unfinished, Shostak returned to Botswana in 1989. This book tells simply and directly of her rediscovery of the Kung people she had come to know years before the aging, blunt, demanding Nisa, her stalwart husband Bo, understanding Kxoma, fragile Hwantla, and Royal, translator and guide. In Shostak's words, we clearly see Kung life: the dry grasslands, the healing dances, the threatening military presence. And we see Shostak herself, passionately curious, reporting the discomforts and confusion of fieldwork along with its fascination. By turns amused and frustrated, she describes the disappointments and chastening lessons that inevitably follow when anthropologists like her younger self romanticize the Kung. Throughout we observe a woman of threatened health but enormous vitality as she pursues the promise she once discovered in the Kung people and above all in Nisa. At the core of the book is the remarkable relationship between these two women from different worlds. They are often caught off guard by the limits of their mutual understanding. Still, their determination to reach out to each other lingers in the reader's mind long after the story ends, providing an eloquent response to questions that Nisa so memorably posed: It was not that we had become the best of friends or like close family. It was simply that she and I had the most straightforward connection I had ever had with anyone before or since. It was as if the Kung culture and my talks with Nisa touched something beyond reason in me. Even though I didn't necessarily like everything Nisa said nor everything about her, my heart had been captured. But how often I wished Nisa had been more noble, more selfless, and more philosophical. Nisa had to be known well to be appreciated for she was complex and difficult. She probably would say much the same about me. We both wanted things from each other and neither of us got as much as we hoped for. That we both got some of what we wanted well that made our friendship extremely valuable from the Epilogue.

The Conflict and Culture Reader Pat K. Chew, 2001. In any conflict, the players seem to invariably view that conflict through the filter of their own cultural experiences. This collection of essays draws on a variety of disciplines to analyze fundamental assumptions about how conflict arises and how it is resolved.

Feminist Ethnography Dána-Ain Davis, Christa Craven, 2016-06-01. What is feminist ethnography? What is its history? How can its methods be applied? How is feminist ethnography produced, distributed, and evaluated? How do feminist ethnographers link their findings to broader publics through activism, advocacy, and public policy? Investigating these questions and more, this cross-cultural and interdisciplinary new text employs a problem-based approach to guide readers through the methods, challenges, and possibilities of feminist ethnography. Dána-Ain Davis and Christa Craven tease out the influences of feminist ethnography across a variety of disciplines, including women's and gender studies, critical race studies ethnic studies education communications psychology sociology urban studies and American studies Feature elements of the text include Essentials excerpts from key texts in the field Spotlights interviews with feminist ethnographers and suggested assignments and readings The text concludes with a conversation among contemporary feminist ethnographers about what feminist ethnography looks like today and into the future This text is accompanied by an author maintained website that can be found here <http://discover.wooster.edu/feministethnography>

Courtyards, Markets, City Streets Kathleen Sheldon, 2018-03-08 Although women have long been active residents in African cities explorations of their contributions have been marginal This volume brings women into the center of the urban landscape using case studies to illustrate their contributions to family community work and political life The book begins with a rich introduction that discusses how women's work in trade and agriculture has been the foundation of African urbanization The contributors then focus on patterns of migration and urbanization with an emphasis on the personal and social issues that influence the decision to migrate from rural areas women's employment in varied activities from selling crafts to managing small businesses the sometimes unavoidable practice of prostitution when options are limited the emergence of complex new family formations deriving from access to courts and the continued strength of polygyny and women's participation in community and political activities The volume includes material from all regions of sub-Saharan Africa and brings together scholars from all the social sciences
