These findings have implications for future research and practice. For example, the results suggest that the use of a single measure of social support may be insufficient to capture the complexity of social support in the workplace. Future research should investigate the use of multiple measures of social support to better understand its role in workplace health and well-being.

1. A molecule of secondary amine will contain 1 H atom in principle, so nitrogen will attach to another atom (H).
2. The other is a tertiary amine, that is, nitrogen is bonded with three other atoms, the previous one is wrong.
3. Tertiary amine has no hydrogen in principle, so it can't be oxidized, therefore, it is not a primary amine. Secondary amine is a secondary amine, so it can be oxidized to a tertiary amine, so it is wrong.
4. The group is called a quaternary amine or tertiary ammonium, depending on the number of hydrogen groups in the molecule. The quaternary should be a quaternary ammonium, so it should have four hydrogen groups, so it is wrong. The other is a tertiary amine, so it is wrong. The other is a tertiary amine, so it is wrong.
