

Ch. 11 Language & Society Chapter - The Cultural? Language by Bartholomew 2016 Ed 3000

Definition: Language: An arbitrary, conventionalized, structured system of symbols that serves as a means of communication

→ Communication: the way that people interact with each other. Language is the means by which we communicate the significance of the world.

→ Arbitrary language: A collection of symbols that are used to represent things that are not directly related to the symbols themselves.

→ Conventional language: The language that is used by the community to communicate with each other.

→ Language family: A collection of languages that are related to each other by a common ancestor.

→ Language group: A collection of languages that are related to each other by a common ancestor.

→ Language group: A collection of languages that are related to each other by a common ancestor.

→ Language group: A collection of languages that are related to each other by a common ancestor.

What makes a language a language? What makes it different?

Language? (Page 404-405) is asking the reader to think about the following:

→ What makes a language a language? What makes it different?

1-1

What makes a language a language? What makes it different?
