Methods for Monitoring and Diagnosing the Efficiency of Catalytic

Converters M. Sideris,1998-06-19 The dramatic evolution of catalytic converters in the last thirty years was a result of a need worldwide to reduce pollution created by the exhaust gases of internal combustion engines Environmental concerns have led American Japanese and European Union EU legislation to pose continuously stricter emission limits for petrol engines in the last decades The catalytic converter has become the most important means of exhaust treatment to achieve the desired emission limits The international legislation has also created a need for a regular assessment of the efficiency of the catalytic converter in order to detect a deterioration of its conversion efficiency as soon as this deterioration takes place The assessment of conversion efficiency of a catalytic converter can take place during normal driving of a vehicle on board diagnosis or OBD or in a workshop by specialized technicians The most important methods nowadays are the OBD methods The evolution of methods concerned with OBD and non OBD monitoring and diagnosing of efficiency of catalytic converters of internal combustion engines is described based on patents and published patent applications Non patent references are also used The basic principles of modern catalytic converters are described in an extensive Introduction where the importance of monitoring and diagnosing the efficiency of catalytic converters is demonstrated The book is divided into four parts The first part describes methods involving the use of oxygen or air fuel exhaust gas sensors to determine the oxygen storage capacity of a catalytic converter The second part describes methods involving the use of temperature sensors to determine the exothermic reaction capacity of a catalytic converter The third part describes all other methods existing in patent literature that monitor and diagnose the efficiency of catalytic converters The great majority of the methods of the third part involves exhaust gas concentration measurements The fourth part comprises a general discussion of all methods described In the beginning of each part a short introduction is given to explain the problem that the methods attempt to solve The methods in each part are presented in chronological order per patent applicant This helps to evaluate how the patent applicant has improved his methods over time A patent number index with information about the patent applicants inventors priorities and patent families an inventor index a company index and a subject index can be found at the end of the book

Taylor, 1984 The use of catalytic converters for the purification of automotive exhaust gases is a relatively new technology which was brought into existence by social pressures for the preservation of acceptable environmental conditions The majority of catalytic practitioners have been able to watch the growth of this technology from its inception to its current state of sophistication Automotive catalytic converter technology is now in a mature state and this chapter from Vol 5 Catalysis Science and Technology by Dr K C Taylor provides a review which covers both the process chemistry and the most important converter design factors Contents 1 Introduction 2 Emission Regulations in the United States 3 Exhaust Emission Characteristics 3 4 1981 Emission Control Technology 5 A Converters 5 B Control System 7 8 Catalyst Screening 6 Laboratory Testing 10 7 The Chemical Reactions 13 8 Composition of Three Way Catalysts 16 A Rhodium 17 21 B Platinum C Palladium 22 D Iridium 22 23 E Ruthenium and Nickel F Cerium Oxide 23 G Search for Alternatives to Noble Metals 24 9 Catalyst Supports 25 A Pellets 26 B Monoliths 26 10 The Transient Behavior of Three Way Catalysts 27 II Deterioration of Three Way Catalysts 35 A Thermal Effects 35 B Phosphorus Poisoning 37 C Lead Poisoning 38 D Catalyst Poisoning by Sulfur 40 12 The 0 4 NO Research Objective 41 13 Control of Diesel Particulate Emissions

Materials Aspects in Automotive Catalytic Converters Hans Bode, Deutsche Gesellschaft für Materialkunde, 2002-06-10 MACC 2001 is the successor meeting of the first international conference on Materials Aspects in Automotive Catalytic Converters MACC 97 and concentrates on the high temperature mechanical and oxidation behaviour of both metal supported and ceramic supported automotive catalysts The metal supported catalyst is based on a ferritic steel with 5 8% aluminium 17 22% chromium and small additions of reactive elements More than 20 000 000 units were produced in 1999 The ceramic supported catalytic converter is based on cordierite The production rate of ceramic supported catalysts is much higher Both materials have specific advantages and disadvantages which determine the application for a given car model In addition to these two basic groups of catalytic carriers the scope of the conference also refers to coating aspects since the influence of the coating composition is becoming more and more important The car and car supplying industries report on their future requirements with respect to performance and service life Maintaining good performance is mandatory particularly in the view of thinner supports and higher temperatures Service life predictions based on modelling and simulation techniques will depend on reliable materials data This volume will therefore be invaluable to all scientists and engineers involved in the design and development of automotive catalysts Advanced Catalytic Converters and Substrates for Gasoline Emission Systems, 2001 Collection of papers from the 2001 SAE World Congress held March 5 8 in Detroit Michigan Paper topics include a comparison of conversion efficiency and flow restriction performance of ceramic and metallic catalyst substrates application of advanced three way catalyst technologies on high cell density ultra thin wall ceramic substrates for future emission legislations prediction of catalytic performance during light off phase with different wall thickness cell density and cell shape modeling the effect of substrate cell shape on conversion in monolith catalysts shear strength of cordierite ceramic catalyst supports suppression of sulfide emission during lean NO_x trap desulfation a non noble metal based catalytic converter for two stroke two wheeler applications and an intelligent catalyst
