

Biggest Element: Right to Land Measurement (PACEL)

International and regional instruments concerning environment

Transboundary relationships

Paragraphs

1. The only instrument that deals with transboundary environmental cooperation (Article 2) is the Convention on Transboundary Effect of Air Pollution.
 - (1) It's voluntary, involves a wide range of air pollutants (both primary and secondary) and covered eight.
 - (2) It's applicable to the limited air pollutants (sulphur dioxide) for acidification and transboundary ground-water pollution.
2. The only one that generally covers other pollution fields, such as noise, is the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution (UNEP).

Tasks

1. The course will compare the national policies with international treaty which requires states to take precautionary and cooperative steps to deal with transboundary pollution that poses serious or significant damage to the environment. The treaty focuses on the sulphur dioxide and the other acidifying pollutants. It will use the legal right approach to joint liability which is designed to induce investment in waste treatment or waste management.
2. The course will identify the important elements of the model used in the transboundary pollution. This includes: victims and polluters; liability; to be proven; damage; mitigation.
3. The course will also identify some other pollution fields, such as noise, that have not been dealt with. Students will understand why a liability rule is not an appropriate way to deal with transboundary pollution in these areas, and they will understand why a liability rule is not an appropriate way to deal with transboundary pollution in these areas.

Exercises

1. A state identifies that across the border pollution has occurred and it is not clear what the responsibility for the pollution is. A state that is not a party to the Convention on Transboundary Effect of Air Pollution is not a party to the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution. A state that is not a party to the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution is not a party to the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution.
2. A state identifies that across the border pollution has occurred and it is not clear what the responsibility for the pollution is. A state that is not a party to the Convention on Transboundary Effect of Air Pollution is not a party to the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution. A state that is not a party to the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution is not a party to the Convention on Long Range Air Pollution.

Final exam: after PACEL

Task 1

The course will compare the national policies with international treaty which requires states to take precautionary and cooperative steps to deal with transboundary pollution that poses serious or significant damage to the environment. The treaty focuses on the sulphur dioxide and the other acidifying pollutants. It will use the legal right approach to joint liability which is designed to induce investment in waste treatment or waste management.
