The transnational group-based intervention focuses on a basic "solid parenting" without criticism, non-accusatory advice, and the children's role and Mother's/Paternal. Parents give their child a name with a meaningful meaning that reflects a religious or linguistic meaning and the child's role in the family. Mothers give children's names and role early experience with the quality of their relationship and their identity and a religious role. Children's role in the family and in the community is also discussed. Parents are encouraged to discuss their relationship and children's role in the family and in the community.

Shrimp (genus Stomatopoda) are characterized by their large, segmented bodies, which are typically divided into three main regions: the head, the thorax, and the abdomen. The head is the most prominent part, featuring large, powerful eyes and a pair of antennae. The thorax is the middle section, which houses the heart and the digestive system. The abdomen is the longest part, ending in a pair of large, pincers called claws. Shrimp are found in a variety of aquatic environments, including oceans, rivers, and lakes. They are important in many ecosystems, serving as both predators and prey.
