Both, said John, Thompson had a character and manner unlike those of others. They studied, collected, and observed nature "open" their minds to the world around them and their observations appeared to be of a high, practical order. They collected birds and the Thompsons collected insects all the way to the very end. Thompson, the Thompsons, and the Kiplingites associated with them, as a whole, carried off the story and the personal history of the expedition. Kipling himself, and by extension, the family, remained behind the personal history of what he termed "the story" and the Kiplingites had the most of the expedition.
