Model 1 (eq. 1) assumes components with all varying storage are equally important for WUE. The same values associated with components vary from 0.01 to 0.001 g/dm<sup>3</sup>, and their power ranges from 0.5 to 0.001. The component that has the least effect is 10<sup>-3</sup> exponent (constant values), the most, high exponent, multiple number and many iterations, leading to other models, more accurately represent water-use efficiency (WUE). The model assumptions are that the model is valid.

10. The second approach to identifying and measuring the impact of a program is to use a control group. This approach involves identifying a group of individuals who are similar to the treatment group in all respects except for the intervention. The control group is then compared to the treatment group to see if there is a difference in the outcome. This approach is often used in randomized controlled trials, which are considered the gold standard for evaluating the impact of a program.
