

WHAT IS ADDICTION?

People use alcohol and other drugs to relax, relieve stress and have fun. But when they use them too often, they can become addicted. Addiction is a disease that affects the brain and makes it hard to stop using a substance. People who are addicted to a substance often have problems with their health, relationships, and work.

WHAT IS ADDICTION?

THE STIGMA OF ADDICTION

Stigma is another reason why the lives of people with addiction are harder. Stigma is a negative attitude or feeling towards a person or group of people. It can make it hard for people to get help and support. People who are addicted to a substance often have problems with their health, relationships, and work.

What can we do about stigma? One way is to talk about 'people with addiction' as 'people with a problem' rather than 'addicts' or 'junkies'. Try to understand where the person is coming from. It's important to be kind and supportive. People who are addicted to a substance often have problems with their health, relationships, and work.
