Layers of the Atmosphere: An Exploration

The Earth's layers are vital to life. Understanding atmospheric phenomena, weather, climate, and space exploration is essential.

Troposphere: The lowest atmospheric layer, extending from the surface to an altitude of about 10-12 km. It is where most weather occurs and where we live.

Stratosphere: The second layer, extending from the top of the troposphere to about 50 km. It contains the ozone layer, which absorbs and scatters solar radiation.

Thermosphere: The third layer, extending from the top of the stratosphere to about 600 km. It is characterized by high temperatures and low density.

Exosphere: The outermost layer, extending from the top of the thermosphere to the edge of space. It is the least dense layer and contains very few particles.

Diagram: A cross-section of the Earth's atmosphere showing the layers and their boundaries. The layers are labeled: Troposphere, Stratosphere, Thermosphere, and Exosphere. The boundaries between them are labeled: Tropopause, Stratopause, and Thermopause. The diagram also shows the Earth's surface, the ozone layer in the stratosphere, and the International Space Station in the thermosphere.
